Some Advantage Improv customers who have benefited from our workshops

A growing number of forward thinking companies train their employees in the same mental agility skills that enable a team of improvisational performers to create an unscripted scene on stage.

Improv in business? Yes, and it's as beneficial as it is fun to learn.

Students gain insight and tools to improve active listening, clear communicating, confident presenting and creative collaborating.

Comments from recent Advantage Improv training events include:

- “Loved it! Want more!”
- “It was a great experience.”
- “This was a master class in improv, working together, collaboration and trust. Fantastic!”
